

We're working in your area

June 2026

Sydney Water plans to increase the capacity of the Willoughby submain. This upgrade will ensure our wastewater network remains reliable, compliant during wet weather events and can service our growing community.

What you need to know

We are in the early investigation stages for the Willoughby Submain Amplification project, which includes site surveys and geotechnical assessments. This includes borehole drilling at Francis Street, Naremburn. The drilling will create a small 125 mm wide hole (about the size of a drink can) to a depth of around 25 meters. A vacuum truck will be on site to support the drill rig and help manage materials.

Timing

Our investigations will take about 7 days to complete, weather and ground conditions permitting.

Our investigations will start on Tuesday 30 June 2026 and are expected to finish by Wednesday 8 July 2026.

Our working hours are 7 am to 6 pm Monday to Friday and 8 am to 1pm Saturdays. We won't work on Sundays.

What you can expect

We understand our work can be disruptive at times, but we will make every effort to reduce our impact as much as possible.

The work area will be supported by about 7 crew members and supporting vehicles. There will also be a small compound area for our workers.

Noise

There will be some noise from our equipment and machinery during the investigations. We will minimise unnecessary loud noises where possible.

Impact to your services

Your water services will not be impacted during these investigations.

Temporary traffic changes

Our work will take up space and will require partial road closure. Traffic controllers will help keep traffic flowing and maintain access for residents and pedestrians. We'll put up barriers and signs around the work area and where temporary traffic changes apply.

Restoration

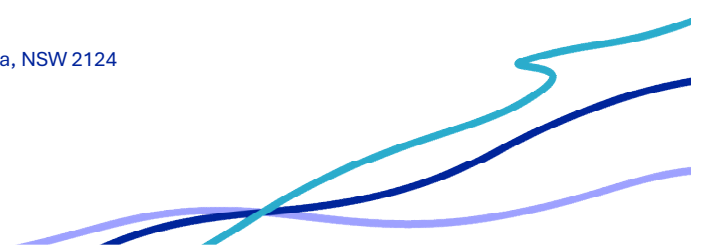

After the work is completed, we'll restore the area to its original condition. And as agreed with the local council.
